

Go Fish & Bug Game Cards

How to Play: This game is played in the same way as Go-Fish. You will need one set of cards per 2-4 students. Deal 5 cards to each student and leave the rest of the cards face-down in a pile. Students must try to get rid of their cards by matching adult and juvenile life stages of each species. Whoever goes first starts by asking someone else if they have a card that they need. If the person they ask has that card, they must give it to them; if they do not have the card the first person needs, they respond “Go Fish” or “Go Bug” and the first student must pick up a card from the pile. When a student has an adult and juvenile card of the same species (i.e., a match), they must lay it down. This continues until someone has no cards left.

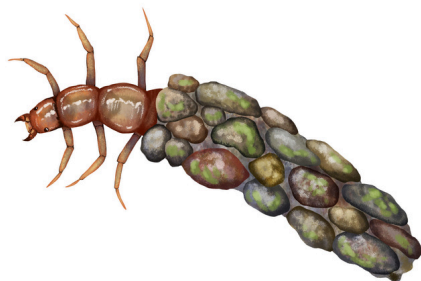

Please note that the Stream Scientists Kits come with one deck of Go Fish & Bug cards, meaning this isn’t a game for the entire class to play at one time. We recommend offering this activity to students who finish the other activities quickly and are in need of something to do while others finish.

Printing Instructions (for those accessing the online resources): Print the following cards, double-sided, ideally using a colour-printer. Then cut them out.

Below is a second version of the game, which is a bit harder. The goal is to match the name of the creature with the picture of it.
